BOQUERIA

192 Acre Lane, Brixton, SW2 5UL

This tapas restaurant, inspired by Barcelona's infamous food market the Mercat de Sant Josep de la Boqueria, has a great reputation, so we were expecting to be well fed. And we weren't disappointed. We went for an early dinner at the decidedly un-Spanish time of 7pm – well, it was a Monday night – and by the time we left, the place was heaving. The food is excellent, and our highlight dishes were pan con tomate (delicious, salty and oily tomato bread), a cheese selection and monkfish with prawns
